From Blanc canvas to beautiful home

Jenny Blanc utilised her natural flair for design when she created the world-renowned Le Manoir Aux Quat' Saisons in 1983 with her then husband Raymond Blanc. Following her success, she founded her own interior design company simply called Jenny Blanc. Her varied portfolio spans country homes, town houses and apartments, as well as exotic commissions in the Caribbean — Jenny also has a showroom on the West Coast of Barbados.

“Our aim is to be a centre of design excellence with a second to none service and to create beautiful, distinctive homes for our clients.” Jenny Blanc

Her distinctive style and exquisite use of colour has brought international success and in December 2012, competing against stiff competition from design practices across the world, Jenny Blanc was presented with the coveted award for the best Interior Design Private Residence at the International Property Awards 2015.

Jenny Blanc met her design director, Sue Thomas-Richardson, in the early days of the business, and together with showroom director, Chrissie Marshall, they created an exceptional interior design business focusing on the clients and their home aspirations. Jenny recognises that people need an efficient, all-encompassing project management service, underpinned by an experienced and creative design team. This, together with an exceptional knowledge of the best, most beautiful fabrics and furnishings on the market, wins her the confidence of her clients, who know she will design the home they have always wanted. Jenny is always personally involved in each project, ensuring the finished result corresponds with her exacting standards.

Contemporary, classic or more traditional, each project has the Jenny Blanc design

“Our work includes beautiful old country houses in the UK as well as chic London apartments. Each project allows us to create entirely unique homes for our clients that go beyond their aspirations. This is what makes our job so special.” Jenny Blanc style. Her sensitive use of colour means that rooms flow seamlessly from one to the next, creating a peaceful and comfortable ambience. Equally at home working on period country houses, smart modern apartments in London, or Barbadian holiday retreats, the design team take inspiration both from their client's wish list and the style and location of the property in order to create the ideal home.
