JENNY BLANC

LONDON BARBADOS

Jenny Blanc used her natural flair for design when she created the world acclaimed "Le Manoir Aux Quat'Saisons" in 1983, with her then husband Raymond Blanc. Following this success, she founded her own interior design practice simply called "Jenny Blanc". Her varied portfolio spans country homes, town houses, apartments as well as exotic commissions in the Caribbean where Jenny also has a showroom, on the West Coast of Barbados.

"Our aim is to be a centre of design excellence with a second-to-none service and to create beautiful, distinctive homes for our clients." Jenny Blanc

Her distinctive style and exquisite use of colour has brought international success and in December 2012, competing against stiff competition from design practices across the world, Jenny Blanc was presented with the coveted award of Worldwide Winner – Best Interior Design Private Residence at the International Property Awards.

In the early days of Jenny Blanc Interiors she met her design director, Sue Thomas-Richardson, a Barbadian interior designer, and together with showroom director, Chrissie Marshall they have created an exceptional interior design business which focuses on the clients' hopes and aspirations for their homes. Jenny recognises that clients need an efficient, all-encompassing design and project management service underpinned by an experienced and creative design team and this, together with an exceptional knowledge of the best, most beautiful fabrics and furnishings on the market, wins her clients' confidence that she will design the home they have always wished for. Jenny is always personally involved in each project to ensure the finished works meet with her exacting standards.

"Our work includes beautiful old country houses in the UK as well as chic London apartments. Each project allows us to create entirely unique homes for our clients that go beyond their aspirations. This is what makes our job so special." Jenny Blanc

Contemporary, classic or more traditional each project has the Jenny Blanc design style encapsulating a sensitive use of colour and rooms which flow seamlessly from one to the next creating a peaceful and comfortable ambience. Equally at home working on period country houses, smart modern apartments in London or Barbadian holiday retreats, the design team take their inspiration from a client's wish list and the style and location of the property to create the ideal home.
